What is this directory about?

This directory has details of suppliers, wholesalers, foodservice providers and farms from in and around Camden who can supply healthy, fresh, seasonal produce on a scale according to your needs – whether you organise occasional office meetings, own a chain of restaurants, or something in between.

Please refer to Your guide to Good Food in Camden www.camden.gov.uk/food to find out more about how and why to choose Good Food for your organisation.

Where the directory refers to local produce, this means produce that is grown, reared or caught within 100 miles of London. We have indicated how the suppliers and producers are sustainable with an:

‘F’ for Fairtrade. Fairtrade is an internationally recognised approach to trading which aims to ensure producers in poor countries get a fair deal. A fair deal includes a fair price for goods and services, decent working conditions, and a commitment from buyers so that there is reasonable security for the producers.

‘O’ for organic. This is produce that is grown free from pesticides and artificial chemical fertilisers; free from animal cruelty and free from genetically modified (GM) animal feed.

‘S’ for seasonal. This is a supplier that sells produce that is grown and then sold as fresh, within the season it naturally grows in the UK.

You will also see reference to food being ‘traceable’. This means the supplier or grower can, on request, tell the purchaser exactly where the food was grown, reared or caught.

This directory forms part of the development of a healthy and sustainable food programme for Camden. It was commissioned and funded by NHS Camden, working in partnership with Camden Council.

Direct from the farm

The businesses listed in this section are predominantly South East England farms selling produce direct from the farm. Some of them are 'hubs' who work cooperatively with a number of farms in close proximity to them (hubs are marked with a * below). This arrangement has environmental benefits such as shared deliveries that means less vehicle movements and less pollution.

Contact details and more information about each farm are provided below.

Farmers' markets in and around Camden

Farmers' market stalls are often a shop window for a much larger, though still sustainable operation. The produce on sale must be reared, caught or bottled on the stallholders' premises and come from within 100 miles of London. As a food buyer for an organisation it is worth talking to the stallholder to see if they can supply your business directly.

Good Food weblinks

All these organisations can tell you more about how, why and what Good Food can do to benefit you, your organisation and your environment.

Organisations in Camden:

- Eating well – NHS Camden

NHS Camden's Healthy eating team is supporting and promoting healthy eating from infancy to adulthood, as well as encouraging children and adults in Camden to maintain/achieve a healthy weight. The team works across a variety of settings including Camden schools, workplaces and communities, providing a range of practical approaches to eating a healthy, balanced diet.

www.camden.nhs.uk/eatingwell

- London Borough of Camden – Corporate Sustainability Team

Camden's corporate sustainability team sits within the culture and environment directorate at Camden Council. The team has 11 members of staff and is helping to ensure that the council achieves ambitious internal and borough-wide environmental sustainability targets.

As well as playing a leading role in the development and management of Camden's healthy and sustainable food strategy, they are responsible for implementing major projects, co-ordinating sustainability initiatives, monitoring against CO<sub>2</sub>, waste and other environmental targets, and communicating environmental issues to staff and the general public via their Small steps, big difference campaign.
